COMMISSIONER ROGERS DEAD.

Baltimorean Held Federal Position Forty-two Years.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8. - Robert Lyon Rogers, United States Commissioner for Maryland, a position which he had held continuously since 1867, died to-day. He was eighty-three years old. Mr. Rogers' health had been failing for nearly a year, but he would not give up, and attended to his duties until a few days ago.

Commissioner Rogers was widely known to lawyers and others having business in the United States Court, and was regarded as a most efficient official, being from his long experience a great help in supplying data to the district attorney and his assistant, and even to the judge himself, concerning cases in the court. He was a man of striking personality.

Mr. Rogers was a member of an old George Washington Tackles Western Maryland family conspicuous in the early annals of the State. He was the son of Micajah Rogers and Mary Lyon Rogers, and was born May 8, 1828, on what was sion, and a graduate of the Harvard Law
